SAFELY ENJOY YOUR BACKYARD FLOCK

By Dr. Mary Jane Lis, State Veterinarian
Bureau of Regulatory Services

The first day of spring is upon us along with the holiday celebration of new life and high expectations of a new growing season.

You can see the activity in local retail stores, shops and garden centers, in magazines, and in online websites selling seeds, garden supplies, holiday decorations, and other warm weather items in anticipation of the new spring season.

It is also the time of year that the Bureau of Regulatory Services at the Connecticut Department of Agriculture receives the greatest number of import permit requests from poultry owners, dealers, and hatcheries for the movement of hatching eggs and live day-old poultry—many of which going to people with small hobby or backyard flocks.

Looking at the poultry imports over the past several years revealed a growing trend for individuals to own backyard poultry in Connecticut. A similar trend was found nationally in the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), National Animal Health Monitoring System (NAHMS) survey.

This popular trend may be contributing to an ongoing increase in Salmonella outbreaks linked to backyard flocks. In 2017, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and multiple state agencies investigated 10 separate multi-state outbreaks of Salmonella infections in people who had contact with live poultry from backyard flocks.

The investigation found 1,120 people in 48 states and the District of Columbia were reported infected with Salmonella. One person died and 249 people were hospitalized. This is the largest number of human illnesses linked to contact with backyard poultry ever recorded by CDC.

Here are steps you can take to protect yourself and others while enjoying your backyard flock.

- Always wash your hands thoroughly with soap and water right after touching live poultry or anything in their environment or handling clothes and shoes that had contact with live poultry. Adults should supervise hand washing of children.
- Do not let live poultry inside the house, in bathrooms, or especially in areas where food or drink is prepared, served or stored, such as kitchens or outdoor patios.
- Set aside a pair of shoes to wear while taking care of the poultry and keep those shoes outside of the house.
- Do not let children younger than 5 years old handle or touch chicks, ducklings or other live poultry without adult supervision.
- Do not snuggle or kiss birds, touch your mouth or eat or drink around live poultry.
- Clean outdoors any equipment or materials used to raise or care for live poultry, i.e. cages, feed or water containers.
- Buy baby poultry from hatcheries that participate in the USDA National Poultry Improvement Plan (NPIP) U.S. Salmonella Monitoring Program. NPIP participation helps reduce the incidence of Salmonella in baby poultry in the hatchery, which helps prevent the spread of infection among poultry and people.

CDC Safe Handling Tips for Eggs from Backyard Poultry

Shell eggs may become contaminated with Salmonella through the laying process, once the eggs are laid, through poultry feed or bedding.

To keep your family healthy, follow the tips below when collecting and handling eggs from a backyard flock:

- Always wash your hands with soap and water after handling eggs, chickens, or anything in their environment.
- Maintain a clean coop. Cleaning the coop, floor, nests and perches on a regular basis will help to keep eggs clean.
- Collect eggs often. Eggs that spend a significant amount of time in the nest can become dirty or break. Cracked eggs should be thrown away.
- Eggs with dirt and debris can be cleaned with fine sandpaper, a brush or cloth. Don't wash eggs, because colder water can pull bacteria into the egg.
- Refrigerate eggs after collection.
- Cook eggs thoroughly. Raw and undercooked eggs contain Salmonella bacteria that can make you sick.
- Know the regulations regarding the sale of eggs to the public.

To learn more about Salmonella and eggs visit the CDC at <https://www.cdc.gov/features/salmonellaeggs/index.html>

THERE'S STILL TIME TO RESPOND TO THE 2017 CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE

USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) needs a Census of Agriculture response from ALL the nation's producers. In order to get an accurate representation of American agriculture – of all farmers and ranchers across the country – NASS will continue to accept completed census questionnaires through spring.

Federal law mandates that everyone who received the 2017 Census of Agriculture questionnaire complete it and return it even if not currently farming.

NASS will follow-up via mailings, phone calls, and farm visits with producers who have not yet responded. Farmers are encouraged to complete their census either online at www.agcounts.usda.gov or by mail as soon as possible.

For more information about the 2017 Census of Agriculture, visit www.agcensus.usda.gov. For questions about or assistance filling out the census, producers can call toll-free (888) 424-7828.

CONNECTICUT CHEESE WINS AWARDS

Two Connecticut cheeses have been recognized as best in class at the 2018 World Championship Cheese Contest.

Arethusa Farm Dairy was awarded best in class in the Blue Veined Cheeses category for their Arethusa Blue which is an English-style blue cheese made and aged at the company's Bantam, CT, facility.

The Calabro Cheese Corporation of East Haven, CT was awarded best in class in the Ricotta category for their hand dipped Ricotta. The Calabro Cheese Corporation was also recognized with a third place award for their Ricotta di Bufala in the All Other Milk Cheeses category.

The 2018 World Championship Cheese Contest was held March 6 – 8 in Madison, WI. The first World Championship Cheese Contest was held in 1957 and is today held every two years. It is the largest technical cheese competition in the world.

This year the competition saw 3,402 entries in 121 categories from 26 foreign countries and 32 US states. These entries were evaluated and scored over a 3-day period by an international team of 55 judges hailing from 20 countries and 15 U.S. states.
